

Greg Hands MP visits Preventicum, July 2008

"Preventative healthcare makes sense both in terms of the benefit that it gives individuals in their personal healthcare, as well as potential financial savings to UK plc as a whole. The challenge for public policy makers is to see services such as this extended from the domain of those working for big corporate enterprises and high net worth individuals to the wider public.

The fact that the different components of the check-up are carried out under one roof, within the convenient time-frame of a half-day, is a great thing. I'm surprised that nobody has offered this service before. As far as I'm concerned, preventive medicine has a massive future, and Preventicum appear to be taking a lead."
